Ingredients

- 2 tbsp vegetable oil
- 2 medium onion chopped
- 3 garlic clove
- 1 piece ginger fresh finely chopped (to give you 2 tbsp )
- 5 cardamom pods
- 1 cinnamon sticks
- 600 g chicken breast boneless skinless cut into bite-size pieces
- 2 tsp ground coriander

- 1.5 tsp garam masala
- 0.3 tsp mace
- 0.5 tsp pepper black
- 150 ml yogurt cold
- 100 ml milk
- 2 small to 2 chilies slit shredded green deseeded
- 1 handful cilantro leaves chopped
- 1 tbsp almonds flaked toasted
- 250 g basmati rice generous with a pinch saffron cooked

Equipment

- bowl
- frying pan
- blender
- wok

Directions

- Heat 1 tbsp of the oil in a deep saut pan or wok. Tip in the onions, then fry over a medium-high heat for about 12–15 mins, stirring occasionally, until a rich golden colour and the pan is sticky on the bottom. While they cook, chop the garlic and ginger. Make a slit down the length of each cardamom pod just deep enough to reveal the tiny seeds.
- Remove the onions from the heat.
- Transfer a third of them to a small blender along with the garlic, ginger and 2 tbsp water. Whizz together to make a paste that is as smooth as you can get it. Set aside.
- Return the onions in the pan to the heat, add the remaining oil, cardamom pods and cinnamon stick, then stir-fry for a couple of mins. Stir in the chicken, ground coriander, 1 tsp of the garam masala, mace and black pepper, then stir-fry for another 2 mins. Reserve 3 tbsp of the yogurt, then slowly start to add the rest, 1 tbsp at a time, stirring between each spoonful. When all the yogurt has gone in, stir in the oniony paste and stir-fry for 2–3 mins. Stir in 150ml water, then the milk. Bring to a boil, then simmer, covered, for 20 mins, scattering in the chillies for the final 5 mins, by which time the chicken should be very tender.

- Remove the cardamom pods and cinnamon. The flavours mellow all the more if refrigerated overnight. When gently reheating, splash in a little water if needed to slacken the korma sauce.
- Finish by stirring in the chopped coriander. Taste and add a little salt if you wish. Swirl in the reserved yogurt. Spoon the korma into bowls, scatter a few almonds over each portion with a sprinkling of the remaining garam masala.
- Serve the saffron rice on the side.
